<<Lonely Planet Dublin>>

内容概要

One Dublin-resident author, over 500 hours of research, nearly 200 eating and drinking recommendations
Full-color coverage of Dublin's highlights     Insights into city life from a local broadcaster, fashion designer and pub landlord     Content updated daily-visit lonelyplanet.com for up-to-the-minute reviews, updates and traveler insights     Swap hen nights for Handel and discover where the first performance of Messiah took place
Go beyond Guinness with a pint of something different at Dublin's blossoming microbreweries     Go to the dogs - literally - at Shelbourne Park's greyhound track     Northside? Southside? You decide which is best over a drink (or two) each side of the Liffey 作者简介： Fionn Davenport Half-Italian and a lifelong supporter of Liverpool Football Club, Fionn is the ideal Dubliner, a native son in love with the city of his birth but with one eye forever on somewhere else. He's left the city many times - usually looking for warmer weather or a job - but always he returns, because too much sun is bad for you and all jobs get boring. But the reason he loves Dublin so much is that it treats gallows humour as high art: why look for a straight answer when a funny one is far more satisfying. Lonely Planet has kept him busy for the last 12 years or so, but in recent times Fionn has branched out, hosting his own radio show on Newstalk 106-108 (you can listen to Culture Shock online at www.newstalk.ie) and making the occasional foray into television.
