内容概要

Uncover a grand church hidden in an attic in the Red Light District. Visit a shoe-shaped home and the office of the future at the Living Tomorrow Pavilion. Sip jenever (Dutch gin) at a traditional tasting house or distillery. Practice your dangling skills sampling herring from a street stall. In This Guide: 42 days of in-city research, five walking tours, three cycling tours, 18 detailed maps. Color Architecture chapter shows the contrast between Amsterdam's classic and modern styles. Local insights from a film director, a boat-tour operator and an author. Content updated daily - visit lonelyplanet.com for up-to-the-minute reviews, updates and traveler suggestions.

作者简介 Jeremy Gray Born in Louisiana of English parents , Jeremy went to university in Texas and has since lived in Britain, Germany and the Netherlands . When he first visited Amsterdam in 1998 . it immediately felt like home , SO he upped and moved to a flat in the Eastern Islands . Soon Jeremy was lingering with the locals in brown cafes , bumping on his bike along the canals and toe-tapping to Jazz at the Bimhuis . He admires the Dutch for their bubbly gezelligheid, spontaneity and openness—and fondly recalls how a near-stranger revealed that she was the test-tube child of his land-lord , S girlfriend'S father . The only Calvinist finger-wag came from his barber , for not supporting the local pub . Jeremy now lives in Berlin , where he divides his time between travel writing , photography and documentary film . He returns to Amsterdam as often as possible just to see gorgeous canals.
