内容概要

Xitang, a town of ancient residences, is renowned for many bridges, Lanes and covered corridors. Visitors may find shelter from the sun and rain under the many extended corridors with hanging red lanterns, and discover a sense of history winding through the cracks along the quiet Lengths of Shipi Lane and Ji Family Lane. The town has numerous Ming and Qing dynasty buildings. You can still sense a profound scholarly air in Zunwen and Zuijing halls, and observe in West Garden a few bridge galleys, appealing as if suspended in the sky. In a small boat you can glide forward through drizzle and willows, looking for the Divine Hatt along the Incense-Burning Waterway while appreciating stone bridges and flowing waters-scenery typical of southeast China.

插图：As its name spreads far and wide, Xitang has attracted a growing number of visitors, propelling the local service industry. There are many simple taverns and restaurants, mostly built on the basis of old residences. The most famous restaurants are Aantang Renjia by Yongning Bridge, Mingqing Shidai and Leguo Fandian near Anjing Bridge, as well as others, including Youyicun, Xiangtang Fandian, Laojie Fandian, Shuishang Canting, and Lao Pin Fang. Quite a few river-side taverns have themselves become scenic spots, with rows of wine jars under their eaves, flying wine banners in front, and opened archaic carved windows. Aantang Renjia and Mingqing Shidai are the two restaurants with the best locations in Xitang. The former is on one end of the Yongning Bridge, and has its door facing Hazy Rain Corridor. Beside the door is an old street Zhumao Street. The east and south of the restaurant is surrounded by water. The restaurant has a spacious dining hall with backrest seats set on the sides of the river. Diners can enjoy the river scenes while lounging in these seats. Also known for its antique furniture, the restaurant was selected as a location for shooting the TV series.
