章节摘录

版权页： foundation for the Party's work in cities. Community Party building is anew issue. We need to earnestly review the experience of Shanghai and other cities where work got off to an early start. The first task of Party building work in communities is to ensure that wherever there are Party members, there are Party organizations to educate and supervise them, and that wherever there are residents, there are Party organizations serving them and there are Party members carrying out their functions. We need to actively carry out Party building in urban communities on the basis of their characteristics and focus on cultural and ethical progress, mass ideological and political work, improvements in all facets of public security, community services, closer ties between the Party and the masses, higher quality of urban residents and more decorum in urban areas. Over the past few years, all regions and departments have achieved some success in adopting new methods and measures in the course of their practical work to address new situations and problems pertaining to strengthening primary Party organizations in response to requirements imposed by the Central Committee. They need to be sure to promptly review their experience and constantly make improvements. In light of the rapid changes now occurring, an important issue requiring the active deliberation and energetic engagement of all Party comrades is how to strengthen primary Party organizations to deal with new situations and new problems. To strengthen these organizations, we must adhere to our Party's long-established fine traditions, experiences and practices, and at the same time, we must adopt the spirit of reform to study and resolve new problems, steadfastly make improvements through practice, and constantly explore new forms, new channels and new methods in the course of making improvements. This kind of practice and exploration needs to comply with the Party Constitution, internal Party rules and regulations, and the country's Constitution and laws, and it needs to help the Party always to implement the Three Represents, Party organizations and members to fully play their roles, the Party to maintain its intimate ties with the masses, and the Party to better lead the people in promoting the great cause of building socialism with Chinese characteristics. In short, Party committees at all levels need to attach great importance to and painstakingly implement the work of building primary Party organizations as well as primary ideological and political work, and earnestly overcome all kinds of formalism.
