章节摘录

版权页： However,we need to solve a number of deep-rooted problems before this new economic system can be complete and mature.The pattern in which public ownership is dominant and economic entities under diverse ownership forms develop side by side needs further institutional improvements.New breakthroughs are needed in SOE reform that is focused on creating a modern corporate structure.More progress needs to be made in establishing a sound,standardized and unified national market.Further improvements need to be made by deepening reform in economic and technological cooperation and competition mechanisms adapted to WTO entry requirements,the system of distribution that integrates distribution on the basis of both work and production factors,the multilevel social security system,the government's administration system and operating mechanisms,and the Party.and state leadership system.We need to continue to strengthen investigations and studies,adapt to the requirements of changing conditions and socialist modernization,and strive to make new innovations in the economic system and other systems. We are carrying out scientific and technological innovation for the purpose of making science and technology a strong driving force behind our country's cross-century development.In the face of the profound new scientific and technological revolution now occurring in the world,we must focus on major scientific and technological issues of strategic,fundamental or vital importance to our country's economy,science and technology,national defense and social development,and tackle them promptly by means of innovation.Adhering to the principle of doing some things while setting others aside,we need to aim for the forefront of world scientific and technological development,seek breakthroughs in areas where conditions are favorable,strive to make discoveries in basic science as well as technological inventions,and achieve scientific and technological progress by leaps and bounds.
