前言

Opportunities for careers in International Business have increased tremendouslyespecially since China joined the World Trade Organization. As a result, the need forcurrent knowledge about international business practices and terminology is crucial. Although there are many reference books available, some are published abroad andtherefore can be very difficult to understand, while those published in China lack the necessary English international business terminology and expressions. A Series ofInternational Business, edited by Professor Weng Fengxiang, solves these problems. The Series consists of four books written in simple English, but it also includes explanations of the more difficult points written in Chinese. Readers are sure tobenefit from his explanations of English international business expressions. ProfessorWeng makes a great contribution to the teaching and learning of internationalbusiness. Professor Weng Fengxiang, having worked as a consultant for internationalcompanies, is very experienced in current international business practice. Currently, he is an Associate Professor of International Business at Shanghai Maritime University. As well as teaching International Business English, Professor Weng alsoteaches International Trade and International Payments. As a leading expert in hisdiscipline, Professor Weng is among the supervisors of International Business Translation postgraduates. Having conducted academic research in the UK, he hasbeen invited to be a Guest Professor at the Business School of University of CentralEngland, Birmingham. Professor Weng is the author of a number of books on International Business English. Changes in international business happen quickly, and keeping up withinternational issues and their impact on international business can be difficult. The Series addresses both the instructors' and the students' needs for current information. I highly recommend The Series to the International Business and Business English learners.
