前言

伴随着国家课程标准的改革和实施,上海的二期课改也在全面推进,致力于培养具有创新精神和实践能力的全面发展的一代新人。

上海二期课改英语教材改革起步早,从1998年正式启动至今已有十多年。

高中《英语(牛津上海版)》试验教材,作为引进教材的借鉴价值非常显著,使用效果明显,在上海市二期课改英语学科的教改探索中发挥了积极的推动作用,在此基础上修订的试用本保留试验本精华,推陈出新,使其更符合学生的实际需要。

为了更好地使用试用本教材,使它的先进编写理念得到实质贯彻,语言目标得到具体实现,我们专门组织了一批富有实践经验的专家和实验区优秀骨干教师共同研究,联合编写这本密切配合修订后的教材教学的辅导读物《导学与测试牛津英语一课一练》丛书。

其用意是竭尽全力地帮助广大中小学生对新教材的学习与实践。

章节摘录

Most fish, as we know, cannot live without water. Indeed we often speak of people who are out of their natural element as being like fish out of water. If a fish is brought out of its natural element it gasps for a time and then dies because as soon as its gills stop being wet, it cannot breathe. But there is one strange fish which often leaves the water, travels inland, and actually climbs trees. It is called the climbing perch and lives in Burma and India. The fish always has a good reason for leaving its watery home. It never thinks of wandering unless it fears that there is a drought at hand. Since it does not want to be stranded, it sets out to look for a deeper pool or river. It has spiny fins which help it to walk over the land in search of a new home. To keep it alive, it has at each side of its head a kind of store-cupboard where it can store supplies of water. This keeps its gills wet, and gives it a chance to breathe until it has reached the safety of another pool. Perhaps the perch may be a long time in finding a new pool. If this happens the wise little fish knows that there is water to be found in the hole of a tree. It keeps this as a last hope and, if its store of water is nearly at an end, it begins to climb a tree. The journey is very slow, but at last the perch reaches its goal, and is rewarded by finding the water which means new life to it.
