章节摘录

In my dreams I'm a very different person, and the world is very different too. For example, last night I dreamed that I was in Africa. It was strange because I've never been there. Maybe it was because I watched an interesting program about Africa on TV before I went to bed. The narrator said that there are fewer animals now in Africa. And then suddenly my dream changed and I was in Turkey, in Istanbul, and I could speak Turkish and English fluently. Oh, I'd like to speak English better than I can now. I'm going to start extra lessons in English at a new language school near my house. If I learn to speak English really well, then I think it will help me become a journalist — that's what I want to be, not a movie director, as I was in another dream I had last week. Sometimes I wish my dreams were true. So many good things happen in dreams. For example the world has fewer problems, and everybody can be friends. And money grows on trees, so no one needs to be hungry — and everyone can have a house. But you know, bad things happen in dreams too. It wasn't too long ago that I had a nightmare !

I dreamed I failed a test. But this has never happened really. When I woke up, my teacher was standing by my desk and looking at me — I must have fallen asleep when I finished the test !
