章节摘录

What is the most important invention of all time ?

Is it the written word that helps US to record information ?

Is it the telephone that lets US talk to people from all over the world ?

Is it the that lets US travel at great speeds to meet others ?

Umberto Eco , an Italian writer , thinks it is something quite different. He says the most important invention might be right in front of your eyes. He is talking about a simple pair of glasses. Modern eye glasses were invented around 1 , 000 years ago. They were more than just a convenient way to read. Before glasses , writers , scientists or teachers who could not see clearly had to memorize everything. After about ten years of poor eyesight , they could not remember well enough and could not work. Glasses meant that people could work into their old age. People who wanted to remember some information could write it down and read it. Eye glasses are one of the world's greatest inventions——and were probably worn by the people who designed the first telephones , cars and computers.?
