前言

As a kind of residential building unique in Shanghai , Shikumen houses have been in existence for about 140 years since they first came into being in the middle of 19th century. During that long period of time , millions of citizens in Shanghai as well as immigrants from other parts of the country have been carrying out their daily lives in Shikumen , to which they felt attached both physically and emotionally. Recently , as a symbol of Shanghai and a witness of the history the city has gone through , Shikumen has attracted much attention both at home and abroad due to its unique form of architecture and special life style as well as the rich cultural traditions associated with it. In the 21st century , with the impact of modernization and internationalization , the city of Shanghai has gradually been losing its unique identity by toppling down many old Shikumen houses which represent the historical and cultural heritage of the city. On the other hand , great efforts are being made to explore new conservation models that can rebuild old Shikumen houses while preserving their original look and charm. The reconstruction of Xintiandi , Tianzifang and Bugao Lane are successful examples of the new models , showing the world that with creativity and effort , Shikumen.

章节摘录

From the middle of the 19th century to the end of the 20th century, the majority of citizens in Shanghai lived in Shikumen. When it became increasingly crowded, people began to move part of their lives to the lanes outside of Shikumen. Narrow as they are, these lanes provide public space for the residents, who have created unique lifestyles and customs with their years of experience of living there.

Living Habits The living habits of residents in Shikumen are very unique. For decades, they have been carrying out their daily lives and conducting business in the lanes, including having meals, washing clothes, trimming vegetables for cooking and dumping out chamber pot.

Having Meals Since many of the residents in Shikumen only have limited space inside their houses, they often choose to have their meals in the lanes, especially in summer. In front of every household, there is a table on which can be found several dishes of meat and vegetables, as well as pickles. All the family members, old and young, sit around the table and enjoy their meals. Some men are even barebacked due to the sweltering heat in summer, and women leisurely fan themselves with palm-leaf fans while enjoying their meals.
