A Comprehension This is a short magazine feature in which three people talk about their most recent holiday and what they thought of /t. Read /t. For items 1-10 opposite , choose from the holidays A-C. The holidays may be chosen more than once. There are two answers to the last two questions.

THREE VERY DIFFERENT HOLIDAYS Three people describe the holiday they have just had with their partner or family

Holiday A It's not snobbery. It's just that we don't like package holidays or package tours , and quite honestly we have enough money to buy the best. This year again we went to an exclusive hotel in the Caribbean with everything you could possibly want and the beach two minutes' walk from our veranda. It was absolute heaven - a holiday paradise , in fact. There were people there to cater for your every need at any time of the night or day. The doorman always had a smile on his face and was full of advice about the island , and the chambermaids were excellent. There was a certain refinement about the hotel , which was highly cosmopolitan , although many of the guests were American or British , and everyone spoke English. Holiday B

Although we normally go on cycling holidays in England , we've just come back from our first camping holiday , and it was great! We drove all the way to the south of France where we had booked into one of the many excellent sites. Granted , it was organized camping , and some people have a low opinion of that , but it was very enjoyable. We got plenty of fresh air , often washing and showering in the open air , and we did a lot of walking. It was a very healthy holiday. We didn't need to take any camping equipment with us , although we obviously took outdoor clothes - anoraks , boots and so on. Everything had been thought of - inside the tent and outside. There was no room here for insularity , with a Dutch family one side , a French family the other , an Indian family opposite and , in the tent behind , a family from Sweden. It was like the United Nations !
