前言

One morning in 1905 , or the 31th year of the reign of Emperor Guangxu of Qing Dynasty , two brothers set out by boat from their hometown Boa-ah , amountain hamlet in Fujian Province on the southern coast of China , for the port city of Xiamen , some sixty miles away. The boys were full of excitement and chatter , especially the younger one. Yutang was ten years old , and today , he was taking leave of his hometown and going with his brother to study in Xiamen. They were sons of Pastor Lin Zhicheng , who was born in the poor village of Wulisha. Pastor Lin was sending his sons to free missionary schools in Xiamen. The Pastor was not a follower of convention , so the boys did not wear queues. Yutang was a little guy , deeply tanned , with a prominent forehead , a pair of sparkling eyes , and a narrow chin. Six miles later , when the skiff came to Xiaoxi , the boys changed to a five-sail junk , and sailed toward Zhangzhou on West River. There were paddy fields and farmhouses on either side of the river , and tall mountains stood behind them , clad in grey-purplish hues. Yutang thought it inexpressibly beautiful. After a days journey , the junk was tied up against the bank under some bamboo trees. Yutang was told to lie down , cover himself with a blanket and go to sleep. But sleep was the last thing on the boys mind. The boatman sitting at the junks stern was sucking at his pipe , and between gulps of bitter tea , telling stories about the Empress Dowager Cixi , who ruled the court today , having put the Emperor Guangxu under house arrest for supporting the reformers at the palace. Another junk was tied up on the opposite bank , brightly lit by lanterns. A soft breeze wafted sounds of merrymaking and music from a lute across the water. Oh , what a beautiful scene !

章节摘录

When Feng came in and told of the arrangements, Mrs. Yao said the price was unheard-of, but there was nothing else to do. The children were excited to learn that there were five carts to go in, and began to talk of how they were going to pair off. Tijen wanted to ride with Silverscreen, the maid, while both Mulan and Mochow claimed Coral. For the children it was all fun and excitement; and for Mulan and Mochow it was their first journey either in carts or in canal boats, and they yearned to see Hangchow, about which they had heard their mother and Coral speak so much. Feng went to call on the Imperial Physician, who was a great friend of the Yao family, and the Imperial Physician promised to bring him the safe conduct and whatever escort he could obtain. An order from Prince Tuan would be protection for them against both soldiers and Boxers on the way. The business of packing seemed so much lighter after Mr. Yao said they were to take only the summer clothing, but there was enough to keep the entire household busy the whole day, except Tijen, who continued to play in the eastern garden with his hawk, interrupting Silverscreen at her other duties. That evening there was a brilliant sunset, promising a hot day for the morrow. After supper the family sat in council and decided how they were going to divide up for the riding in the different carts. To each one Mrs. Yao explained clearly that they were going to Tehchow to take a boat, and gave the address of their home at Hangchow—just in case any-one should get lost. Then all were told to go to bed early as they were to get up at dawn.
