<<科技英语阅读与翻译>>

内容概要

本教材的编写宗旨是满足研究生学习科技英语阅读和翻译的需要，通过各种练习的设计和安排，将科技英语阅读和翻译两项技能的学习融为一体，互相补充，互相促进。

对于研究生来说，科技英语的学习已不仅仅是了解语言特点、熟悉科技词汇的使用和一般科技文章的翻译，而是要针对科研工作的需要，以语言的实际应用为目标，掌握更高层次的技能，包括灵活运用各种阅读技巧、准确深入理解文章内容、熟悉各种学术出版物的内容和体系、掌握科技英语翻译方法、了解英汉科技语言表达方面的差异、准确地进行翻译等。

本教材共12章，每章由“科技文章阅读与翻译”和“学术阅读”两大部分组成。

科技文章节选自著名科技期刊《科学美国人》(ScientificAmerican)近期发表的论文，以及普林斯顿大学出版社近年出版的专著节选，内容涉及自然、物理、计算机、数学、气象、环境、医学、太空探索、农业技术、机器人等多个领域。

章节摘录

It is also clear that the early-nineteenth-century flowering of collecting and naming resulted from the greater affordability of transoceanic steam travel and from European imperial expansion and settlement, especially in the rich tropical environments of the southern hemisphere. In North America, naturalists like John James Audubon followed the military frontier into the species-rich environments of the southeastern United States. And the western boundary and transport surveys of the 1850s took naturalists like Spencer Baird into the faunally diverse and virtually unworked areas of the American West. No one has tried to map the historical geography of taxonomic knowledge onto that of imperial expansion and settlement, but I would expect a close correlation. If trade has followed flags, so also have naturalists and collectors. Access was crucial: wherever improved transportation technology and colonial infrastructure afforded ready access to places previously expensive or dangerous to reach, there the pace of discovery of new species will soon pick up. The third of these cycles of collecting—I have without fanfare been calling it "survey" collecting—is the least well known and the most surprising. We do not think of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries as being a great age of discovery in natural history; but they were. One need only peruse the annual reports of national and civic museums to appreciate the enormous enthusiasm for expeditions and collecting. In the United States alone dozens or scores of collecting expeditions were dispatched each year to the far corners of the world between 1880 and 1930: hundreds in all, or thousands—perhaps as many as in the previous two hundred years of scientific expeditioning. They certainly produced as much knowledge of the world's biodiversity as any of the earlier episodes of organized collecting.
