章节摘录

I Learned to Drive a Car 我在学开车 Mr. King lived in a city. He had some big shops and got a lot of money. His son, Jack, studied in a middle school. The boy liked everything but studying. He didn't listen to his teachers in class carefully and never finished his homework on time. He always played football when he was free. And he could never pass the exams. His father had no time to stay at home and didn't know about it. One day Miss Read, Jack's English teacher, called Mr. King. On the telephone she told him all about the boy's studies. She wanted him to help her to educate the boy at home. The man heard this and wasn't happy. When his son came back from school, he gave him a good beating. But soon he felt sorry for it when he saw the boy crying in his room. The next morning, before Jack went to school, he asked, "What do you want me to buy for you next year?" "A car," answered the boy. "OK," said Mr. King. "Study hard, my son! I'll buy a car for you if you pass the exams next term." Another term was over, Jack failed the exams again. Mr. King had a look at the school report and asked, "What did you do this term, Jack?" "I learned to drive a car," answered the boy.
